Liaoning University and Shenyang University Hold Signing Ceremony on Cooperation

On May 26, 2025, a signing ceremony on cooperation between Liaoning University (LNU) and Shenyang University was successfully held. Pan Yishan, Secretary of the CPC Committee of LNU, Yu Miaojie, Deputy Secretary of the CPC Committee and President of LNU, Qu Xiangjun, Secretary of the CPC Committee of Shenyang University, Zhao Yanzhi, President of Shenyang University and Vice Presidents Zhang Guangsheng and Tang Jupeng of Shenyang University attended the event. Yan Hai, Vice President of LNU presided over the ceremony.

At the ceremony, Pan Yishan noted that Liaoning University and Shenyang University had long maintained a close cooperative relationship, with mutual support in areas such as talent cultivation, disciplinary development, and internationalized education. He expressed the hope that through strategic cooperation, the two universities would promote resource sharing and draw on each other's strengths. By doing so, it would serve as a pacesetter for cooperation between local universities, thus serving the economic and social development needs of Liaoning Province and Shenyang City and contributing to regional industrial upgrading and technological innovation.

Qu Xiangjun shared the development of Shenyang University in recent years. He added that the university aims to build a "university with emotion and human touch" and focuses on the growth of both teachers and students. He promised that in the future, a daily communication and coordination mechanism would be established with LNU to fully implement specific projects in the cooperation agreement.

Yu Miaojie and Zhao Yanzhi jointly signed the Cooperation Agreement between Liaoning University and Shenyang University. The two parties will carry out in-depth cooperation in such aspects as discipline development, talent training, scientific research cooperation, platform building, international cooperation and exchanges and think tanks.

Pan Yishan Attends 2025 PhD Face-to-Face Activities in Shenyang

On May 22, 2025, the 2025 PhD Face-to-Face Activities was grandly kicked off. Pan Yishan, Secretary of the CPC Committee of Liaoning University (LNU), was invited to attend the PhD Face-to-Face Activities held at Shenyang Broadcasting and Television Station. Approximately 160 participants attended the event, including Wu Tingbao, Member of the Standing Committee of Shenyang Municipal Party Committee and Vice Mayor, Sun Hongwei, Member of the Standing Committee of Shenyang Municipal Party Committee and Head of the Organization Department, Wang Zhigang, Secretary of the CPC Leadership Group and Director of Shenyang Municipal Bureau of Human Resources and Social Security, Mao Zhiyuan, Secretary of the Party Branch and Director of Shenyang Branch of the Chinese Academy of Sciences, Mei Jinchun, Secretary of the Party Committee and Deputy Director of Liaoning Materials Laboratory as well as PhD representatives who have worked in Shenyang and new PhD representatives from home and abroad.

Pan Yishan addressed the development prospects for young talents at Liaoning University and the university's policy support from current development opportunities, long-term development prospects, academic development and comprehensive development. He sincerely invited outstanding young talents to join Liaoning University. Taking the growth of outstanding PhD teachers who have joined the university in the past two years as examples, he noted that the university's Party committee attaches great importance to the development of young talents. He added that by fully utilizing national, provincial and municipal talent policies, the university continuously strengthens support for young talents' development and builds growth mechanisms and platforms for them, which enables talents to settle down, feel at ease, and thrive at Liaoning University. Through the high-quality development of Liaoning University, it will contribute to the Three-Year Action Plan for Comprehensive Revitalization of Liaoning Province.

The event featured the atmosphere of "Mayor Invites You to Home as a Guest", which narrowed the distance between PhD students and Shenyang municipal leaders and leaders of employers. Officials provided detailed introductions regarding Shenyang's urban development, talent introduction and cultivation policies, employment and other aspects.

departments to further strengthen in-depth cooperation with localities and units, make concerted efforts in internship base construction, social service, alumni work, and other aspects, and comprehensively improve the quality of talent training to promote high-quality and full employment of graduates.

At the recruitment fair, Yu Miaojie had cordial exchanges with the attending graduates, learning about

On May 14, Yu Miaojie, President of Liaoning University (LNU), went deep into the College of Foreign Studies to participate in the special recruitment fair themed "Small and Exquisite, Specialized and Excellent". Zhang Hongxin, Deputy Secretary of the University Party Committee, also attended the event.

At the recruitment fair, Yu Miaojie communicated with enterprises such as Neusoft Group Co., Ltd., New Oriental Education & Technology Group Inc., Benxi Tools Co., Ltd., Kangbao Hengshui United High School, Liaoning Feiyue Study Abroad Education Consulting Co., Ltd., and alumni enterprises including Shenyang Baoshun' an Safety Equipment Co., Ltd. and Northern Fuxing Commercial Society (Liaoning) Trading Co., Ltd. He learned about the recruitment needs of employers, solicited their opinions and suggestions on the university' s talent training and employment guidance services, and hoped that relevant enterprises and public institutions would provide more employment opportunities for the university' s graduates. Yu Miaojie required the college and relevant functional their job application intentions, reviewing their resumes, and providing employment guidance. He encouraged graduates to change their employment concepts, consider jobs in enterprises and at the grassroots level, and wished the graduates who are about to step out of the campus to shine in their future jobs and demonstrate the mission and responsibility of LNU students.

At the recruitment fair, 35 employers from both inside and outside the province attended, covering fields such as international trade, human resources administration, public services, and education and training. The event gathered high-quality employers of various types, including state-owned and central enterprises, representatives of alumni enterprises, and school-enterprise cooperation units. A total of 77 job positions were provided, with a demand for 759 personnel, attracting more than 600 on-site participants from relevant current students and graduates. Enterprises received 312 resumes, conducted 157 on-site interviews, and initially reached employment intentions with 43 students.

LNU and 11 Universities Jointly Launch Changchun Initiative

On May 23, 2025, the 63rd Higher Education Exposition grandly kicked off at the Northeast Asia International Expo Center in Changchun, Jilin Province. With the theme "Integration, Innovation and Leadership: Building China into a Leading Country in Education", this expo was unprecedented in scale, effect and significance. It set up a Forum on "Building China into a Leading Country in Education, Reform and Development of Higher Education", which focused on 11 themes including training virtuous talents in the new era, the development of Four News 2.0, cultivation of top-notch innovative talents, employment-oriented education, "Double First-Class" development and the evaluation and reforms of universities in the new era. Yu Miaojie, President of Liaoning University(LNU), attended the forum activities, namely "Changchun Initiative for Universities to Serve the All-Round Revitalization of Northeast China".

At the event site, Yu Miaojie joined leaders from Jilin University, Northeastern University, Harbin Institute of Technology, Northeast Normal University, Harbin Engineering University, Inner Mongolia University of Science and Technology, Inner Mongolia Minzu University, Beihua University, Qiqihar University, and Yanbian University to jointly launch the initiative.

The initiative firstly aims to support and serve the high-quality development of the economy and society. The second is to accelerate the building the area into an important place for talents. The third is to build a highland of scientific and technological innovation with significant influence. The forth is to shape a characteristic ideological and cultural hub in Northeast China. The fifth is to forge a new ecosystem of regional collaboration among universities. The sixth is to promote exchanges and mutual learning among people through high-level opening-up.

Changchun Initiative represents a solemn commitment by universities in the three provinces and one autonomous region in serving national strategies. It is also an important mission in building China into a leading country in education and a pacesetter for forging an educational community with a shared future. Social services is an inherent requirement for universities to cultivate talents in socialist countries. LNU will firmly bear it in mind that serving Liaoning Province is serving the country. It will work hard to promote its "Double First-Class" development with a more comprehensive vision, opening up to wider areas, conducting deeper reforms and seeking development in a higher level. By doing so, it will contribute its efforts in the comprehensive revitalization of Liaoning Province and the Northeast China as China promotes Chinese modernization across the country.

Jiemian News Interviews Yu Miaojie: China Says No to US Trade Hegemony

Recently, Jiemian News interviewed Yu Miaojie, a deputy to the National People's Congress, Fellow of the International Economic Association and President of Liaoning University. The following is the full text of the interview.

(Yu Miaojie, President of Liaoning University, stated that China should seek to reduce the 20% tariffs imposed over the so-called fentanyl issue in the next phase of negotiations.)

On Monday, China and the US issued a joint statement on their economic and trade talks in Geneva, significantly lowered bilateral tariff levels. How should the outcomes of this round of China-US economic and trade talks be viewed? What will be the focus of the next phase of negotiations? What will happen following the 90-day suspension period? How will the global economic and trade landscape evolve? Regarding these questions, Yu Miaojie, President of Liaoning University was interviewed by Jiemian News.

He noted that this round of negotiations is a significant victory for China, demonstrating the success of China's strategy of keeping the door open for talks; and being ready to fight back if necessary. This success will also encourage other countries to resist US trade hegemony.

Calculations by several scholars based on the joint statement indicate that after this round of talks, the average US tariff on Chinese goods will temporarily drop to around 50%.

Yu Miaojie stated that, in the short term, a 50% tariff remains highly damaging for the US economy, so further reductions are expected. In the next phase of negotiations, China should seek to cut the 20% tariffs imposed related to the so-called fentanyl issue. In the long term, he predicted that China will further strengthen its economic and trade cooperation with ASEAN and the EU, while the US is likely to revert to its historical Monroe Doctrine and isolationism, be absent from the new wave of globalization.

Professor Yu Miaojie is a distinguished scholar in international trade and finance. In 2024, he was invited to serve as an associate editor of the Economic Journal, a top-tier global economics publication. During the 2018 China-US trade war, he advised China to emphasize proportional and equivalent countermeasures rather than equal scale, a strategy that was flexibly applied by the Chinese government.

Jiemian News: How do you view the outcomes of the China-US economic and trade talks in Geneva?

Yu Miaojie: This negotiation truly reflects the principle of equality and mutual benefit, particularly the importance of equality. Therefore, I consider this a great victory for China in the Trump 2.0 trade war, safeguarding both our interests and dignity as a major nation. It demonstrates to the world China's commitment to keeping its word and advancing economic globalization.

This significant progress is also a testament to the success of our consistent strategy of keeping the door open for talks; ready to fight back if necessary, a strategy of promoting peace through resistance. It represents the realization of the true multilateral trade outcomes we have championed and reflects China's refusal to succumb to Trump's trade threats, and its steadfast commitment to trade globalization.

Jiemian News: What are the main reasons behind Trump's decision to significantly reduce tariffs?

Yu Miaojie: First, rising inflationary pressures in the US. To combat inflation, the Federal Reserve needs to maintain high interest rates as only high rates can attract capital to banks and curb inflation. However, this is clearly detrimental to economic growth as high interest rates cool economic activities. This contradiction has put the Trump administration under immense pressure.

Second, the reshoring of US manufacturing is impossible in the short term. Even if Trump's tariff policies were effective, reshoring would take at least 10 to 20 years time that history and other nations are unlikely to grant, given the US's lack of comparative advantages in manufacturing.

Third, Trump initially hoped to increase tariff revenues, but when tariffs reach prohibitively high levels that imports become unviable, the high tariffs become counterproductive. These three factors collectively pushed the Trump administration to proactively seek negotiations with China.

Jiemian News: In the joint statement, the two sides will establish a mechanism to continue consultations on economic and trade relations. How do you expect the negotiations to proceed?

Yu Miaojie: The latest statement notes that the US retains the remaining 10% tariffs on Chinese goods imposed under Executive Order 14257 on April 2. Before Trump took office this year, the average bilateral tariffs were around 20%. After taking office, Trump imposed two rounds of tariffs totaling 20% on China over the fentanyl issue, plus the 10% tariffs added on April 2, bringing the total tariffs on Chinese goods to approximately 50%.

High tariffs are particularly harmful to the US. If the US wants to reduce its trade deficit, lower inflation and boost economic growth, tariffs must be further reduced. Therefore, the next goal of our negotiations should demand the US revoke the unjustified 20% punitive tariffs linked to fentanyl exports.

From China's perspective, our approach remains consistent: keeping the door open for talks; ready to fight back if necessary, adhering to the principles of multilateralism and responding with reason, advantage, and restraint.

Jiemian News: The joint statement mentions that 24% of the tariffs imposed on April 2 will be suspended for 90 days. After this period, will these 24% tariffs be lifted? Previously, the Trump administration implemented a 90-day suspension to countries other than China. What will happen to their tariffs after 90 days?

Yu Miaojie: After 90 days, I believe these 24% tariffs should be lifted. Rationally speaking, they ought to be, but Trump's hallmark is unpredictability, so it's also possible that he might reimpose them. If he does, we can respond with equivalent countermeasures.

As for other countries, after the 90-day suspension, I expect Trump will continue imposing high tariffs though not uniformly on all nations. His so-called "art of the deal" involves proposing exorbitant tariffs, then offering a discount, creating the illusion that other countries owe him or that he's granting them a favor. Previously, most nations lacked the courage or capacity to counter the US like China did and chose to endure silently. But after 90 days, I suspect other countries will also begin to say no to US trade hegemony, as China has set a powerful example.

Jiemian News: What should China do next in response to the trade war? How might the global economic and trade landscape evolve?

Yu Miaojie: In this trade war, China has earned immense international prestige. Among over 200 countries worldwide, only China dared to say no to US trade hegemony. This is the responsibility and stature of a major nation.

Going forward, I expect that China's economic and trade ties with ASEAN and the EU will be further strengthened. The Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) already exists between China and ASEAN. As for China and the EU, the China-EU Comprehensive Agreement on Investment (CAI) was previously shelved for various reasons, but now is an excellent opportunity for its revival. When the EU realizes the US is unreliable, cooperation with China becomes a way forward, and CAI negotiations may resume.

To counter US trade coercion, diversifying export destinations is the best approach. In April, China's exports to the US fell by 21% year-on-year, yet total trade volume rose. Why? Because trade with other regions particularly ASEAN, the EU, Africa, and Latin America increased significantly.

Additionally, efforts in services trade must continue. When the Ministry of Commerce proposed the goal of becoming a trade powerhouse in 2010, a key aspect was transitioning from a large trade nation to a strong one by excelling in services trade. China must now address its weaknesses by improving services trade, particularly in outbound education and tourism.

Moreover, China should actively pursue outward direct investment. Unlike the US, China's investments abroad not only create substantial local employment but also involve technology transfer. China is confident that even if today's best technologies are transferred, even better ones will emerge tomorrow.

In attracting foreign investment, China's advantages remain significant, especially in capital-intensive industries. For labor-intensive industries, the advantages are less pronounced due to higher labor costs compared to Southeast Asia. However, for such industries, the critical factor isn't labor costs but the presence of supporting upstream and downstream industrial chains. China's robust industrial chain integration and industrial clustering remain the core strengths of its manufacturing sector.

Will globalization continue? I boldly predict: it will. But the new globalization will exclude the US, which may retreat into its historical roles of Monroe Doctrine and isolationism. This is one point of the profound changes unseen in a century.

Yang Yufeng from PKU Delivers Song Zexing Distinguished Lecture Series

Recently, the 24th Lecture of Liaoning University's Song Zexing Distinguished Scholars Forum was held at the Lecture Hall of the Chongshan Campus Library. Yang Yufeng, Research Fellow from the Energy Research Institute of Peking University, delivered an academic report titled Century-Old Changes and China's Development Strategy: Focusing on the Construction of China's Energy Security System and the Realization of "Double Carbon" Strategic Goals. Pan Yishan, Academician and Party Secretary of Liaoning University, attended the lecture and presented a commemorative plate to Research Fellow Yang Yufeng. The event was chaired by Professor Zhang Xinghong, Assistant to the President.

At the Lecture, against the backdrop of century-old changes, Yang Yufeng explained the historical context of global energy and political-economic pattern shifts, the basic laws of global energy transition, and the green, low-carbon, high-quality development process during China's pursuit of its Two Centenary Goals. By interpreting the Energy Law of the People's Republic of China, he focused on the construction of energy and strategic resource bases in the Yellow River's J-shaped Bend region, elaborating on the importance of high-quality development and high-level protection in the Yellow River Basin.

Ge Chunhua, Dean of the College of Chemistry, and Xu Lianman, Associate Dean of the College of Environment, shared their learning insights and had an in-depth exchange with Yang Yufeng on issues such as the development of interdisciplinary fields integrating energy, economy, ecological environment, and climate change.

This lecture was hosted by the Institute of Science and Technology Research of Liaoning University. More than 150 faculty and student representatives

LNU Hosts the Forum on “High-level Opening-up of Education and Cultivation of Top-notch Economics Talents” of the 63rd Higher Education Exposition

On the morning of May 24, education opening-up policies, the "Forum on the Integrated Development of Education, Technology and Talent of China Higher Education Training Center" and the "Forum on High-level Opening-up of Education and Cultivation of Top-notch Talents in Economics" of the 63rd Higher Education Exposition were held in Conference Room 104 of the Northeast Asia International Conference Center in Changchun City, Jilin Province. Directed by the China Association of Higher Education, hosted by the China Higher Education Training Center, and undertaken by Liaoning University, the forum focused on hot issues such as the interpretation of national

the current situation and trends of international exchange and cooperation in higher education, the coordinated development of education opening-up and regional economy, the internationalized cultivation practice of top-notch economics talents, and the construction of top-notch economics student cultivation bases. Kong Feng, Deputy Director of the Education Department of Liaoning Province; Yu Miaojie, President of Liaoning University; Yan Hai, Vice President of Liaoning University; Cai Lidong, Executive Vice President of Jilin University; Zhang Guangcui, Deputy Secretary of the Party Committee of Changchun Normal

University, and other officials attended the forum. Experts and scholars from Jilin University, Jilin University of Finance and Economics and other universities gathered to discuss new paths for the high-level opening-up of education and write a new chapter in the cultivation of top-notch economics talents. The opening and closing ceremonies of the forum were presided over by Yan Hai.

Yu Miaojie delivered the opening speech on behalf of Liaoning University. He warmly welcomed all leaders and guests, and expressed heartfelt gratitude to the Liaoning Provincial Department of Education for its care and guidance, as well as to colleagues from fraternal institutions for their strong support. He outlined the practical blueprint for high-level opening-up of education and cultivation of top-notch economics talents from three dimensions: the vision of "opening-up as the key", the wisdom of "collaboration as the foundation", and the responsibility of "innovation as the soul".

LNU Convenes the 13th Congress of the Communist Youth League

From May 28 to 29, the 13th Congress of the Communist Youth League of LNU was held at the Puhe Campus of LNU. Shi Hongbo, Deputy Secretary of the Communist Youth League Liaoning Provincial Committee; Sun Tao, Secretary of the Communist Youth League Shenyang Municipal Committee; Pan Yishan, Secretary of the Party Committee of LNU; Yu Miaojie, Deputy Secretary of the Party Committee and President of LNU; and university leaders Zhang Hongxin, Huo Chunhui, Wang Peng, Qiu Huanguang, and Yan Hai attended the opening ceremony.

Pan Yishan, on behalf of the LNU Party Committee, extended warm congratulations on the successful convening of the Congress and fully affirmed the outstanding achievements made by the Communist Youth League of the University in recent years. He pointed out that over the past five years, the University's Communist Youth League has taken enhancing its ability to lead as the main focus, strengthening organizational capacity as the driving force, improving service capabilities as the key point, and increasing contribution as the goal, injecting youthful momentum into all aspects of the University's work. He put forward four hopes for the Youth League organizations at all levels and the majority of league members and young people in the University: 1. Establish the ambition to serve the country and strive to be ambitious Liaoning University youth in tune with the times', integrating youthful struggles into the great cause of the Party and the people. 2. Enhance national capabilities and strive to be 'talented Liaoning University youth with excellent skills', devoting themselves to the reform, construction, and development of the University with high spirits. 3. Cultivate a heart of dedication and strive to be 'virtuous Liaoning University youth with moral integrity', establishing the concept of growing into talent by rooting in grassroots positions and making contributions on the job. 4. Shoulder the responsibilities of the era and strive to be achieving Liaoning University youth with courage and commitment, deeply understanding the great significance of advancing Chinese-style modernization, working steadfastly and diligently to achieve the mutual pursuit of personal ideals and Chinese-style modernization, and striving to compose a magnificent chapter for Liaoning University youth!

Yu Miaojie delivered the opening speech at the Congress. He pointed out that the Communist Youth League of the University has closely focused on the fundamental task of fostering virtue through education, deeply integrating ideological guidance into all aspects of league members' and young people's growth. By cultivating patriotism through practical education, stimulating innovative vitality through scientific and technological innovation education, enhancing sense of responsibility through service-oriented education, and nurturing spiritual character through cultural education, it has guided young people to bravely shoulder their youthful missions, continuously improved the League's leadership, organizational capacity, service capability, and contribution to the overall situation, and promoted the high-quality development of the League's work. He hoped that the majority of young people would, with the heroic spirit of "Rest assured, Party; we are determined to strengthen the country," integrate their personal ideals into the overall situation of national development; with the practical spirit of "standing on solid ground and making long-term efforts," courageously scale new heights in academic research and innovation and entrepreneurship; and with the sincere heart of "devoting themselves to the people and being willing to contribute," demonstrate their responsibility in serving society and benefiting the people, striving to compose a new chapter of "Building a Strong Country, Liaoning University Takes Action."

The 13th Congress of the Communist Youth League of Liaoning University closed after successfully completing all agendas. Zhang Hongxin congratulated on the successful convening of the Congress and the establishment of the new committee. He pointed out that the Congress reviewed and summarized the valuable experience of the University's Communist Youth League in practical exploration and reform and innovation over the past five years, deeply analyzed the opportunities and challenges faced by the Communist Youth League in colleges and universities in the new era, and scientifically planned the action path for the next five years. He put forward three hopes to the Youth League organizations at all levels, league cadres, and the majority of league members and young people in the University: first, to deepen the foundation of faith and forge the true color of youth in continuous struggle; second, to bravely shoulder the mission of the era and temper excellent skills in the unity of knowledge and practice; third, to be determined to reform and tackle tough issues and demonstrate youthful responsibility in upholding integrity and innovation. More than 300 people attended the opening ceremony of the Congress, including responsible comrades of the Communist Youth League committees of 16 brother colleges and universities in Liaoning, responsible comrades of relevant functional departments (units) of the University, secretaries of each student training unit, deputy secretaries in charge of student work, and official representatives.

A total of 208 delegates from 7 delegations, representing the Youth League committees and general branches of 29 grassroots colleges across the university, attended the Congress on behalf of all 20,894 Communist Youth League members in the university.
